DESCRIPTION:

The Humberto Canale history commences in the 19th century, after the end of the "Desert Campaign"...Visionary farmers began importing the necessary equipment with which to establish a sound agricultural base capable of producing quality wines. In 1909 Humberto Canale winery was founded by the engineer who gave it his name. He played an important role in the development to the Upper Valley giving the industry an anonymous profile which hardly changed with the founding of small, individual wineries.

TASTING NOTES:

The wine has an intense purplish red color. On the nose it is highly aromatic, showing a good balance between depth and strength, with elegant nuances of small red fruits such as raspberries and gooseberry, which is typical from Patagonia. In the mouth, it displays soft sweet tannins, a medium and well balanced body, which is inviting and ready to drink.
